

Hall of Fame | Dooley Crighton-Bellamy Bellamy's Organic, Launceston, Tasmania

Dooley Crighton-Bellamy, Co-Founder of Australia's leading organic baby food and formula brand, Bellamy's Organic, has been added to the influential list of names who have made a lasting contribution to Australia's organic industry, after being inducted into the Hall of Fame at this year's Australian Organic Industry Awards.

AOL Chairman, Martin Meek, said inductees to the coveted Hall of Fame were both innovative and inspirational to the certified organic sector.

"Dooley is a true innovator, starting Bellamy's Organic's in 2004 when she was unable to find an Australian organic baby food option for her young children," Mr Meek said.

"She has spent three decades committed to the Australian and New Zealand organic industry, and alongside Bellamy's has launched a range of commercial innovations and supported certified organic farmers, suppliers and industry associations along the way."

Over the years, Mr Meek said Dooley had extended her offering well-beyond her original aim of making simple, nutritious and organic food for infants.

"Dooley has supported the growth and development of women, mothers and younger generations through education and awareness of organics, as well as baby, infant and mothers' health," Mr Meek said.

"She has been a strong advocate for sustainable packaging, organic farming and is passionate about plant-based nutrition, gut health, mood and mental health for women, adolescents and children."

Mr Meek said Bellamy's Organic had achieved the outcomes many businesses strive for.

"Bellamy's were the first certified organic company to create a strong export presence and then exit via a very successful IPO," he said.

"Dooley continues to inspire the industry by showing us what's possible, which is why she was chosen as a very worthy recipient of the Hall of Fame Award."

Learn more about Bellamy's Organic here.